

Section 4. County Profile

Profile information is presented and analyzed to develop an understanding of a study area, including the economic, structural, and population assets at risk and the particular concerns that may be present related to hazards analyzed later in this plan (e.g., significant coastal areas or low lying areas prone to flooding or a high percentage of vulnerable persons in an area). This profile describes the general information of the County (government, physical setting, population and demographics, general building stock, and land use and population trends) and critical facilities located within Suffolk County.

4.1 General Information

Suffolk County was established on November 1, 1683, as one of the ten original counties in New York State. Suffolk County was named after the county of Suffolk in England, from where many of its earliest settlers originated (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2005). Suffolk County's western border is approximately 15 miles from the eastern border of New York City. According to the U.S. Census data, the Suffolk County estimated population in 2012 was 1,499,273. Suffolk County is one of the 57 counties in New York State and is comprised of 10 towns and 31 incorporated villages. Within each town and village, there are incorporated and unincorporated areas (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007). The population of Suffolk County is larger than ten states and ranks as the 24th most populated county in the country (U.S. Census Bureau, 2012). Suffolk County is bordered by Nassau County to the west and major water bodies to the north, south, and east.

4.1.1 Physical Setting

This section presents location, topography and geology, hydrology and hydrography, climate, land use and land cover.

Location

Suffolk County is part of the Long Island Region, located at the southern tip of New York State and east of New York City. Suffolk County's land area is approximately 911 square miles. The County is 86 miles long and approximately 15 miles wide. The County is bordered by Nassau County to the west, by the Long Island Sound to the north, the south shore bays and the Atlantic Ocean to the south, and the Peconic Bay System and Gardiner's Bay to the east. The eastern end of Suffolk County is divided into two peninsulas, the North Fork and the South Fork, and contains large bays. The County itself is divided into ten towns, which contain many villages and hamlets (Figure 4-1).

As illustrated in Figure 4-2, Long Island's southern coastline faces the open waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Due to its geographic location, Suffolk County is exposed and vulnerable to numerous natural hazards, especially the unobstructed path of coastal storms traveling up the Atlantic coast.

Topography and Geology

Long Island is located within the Atlantic Coastal Plain, one of the eight major physiographic regions of New York State. The region is underlain by poorly consolidated sedimentary formations of Cretaceous, Tertiary, and Quaternary age formations that gently dip seaward. Suffolk County is underlain by predominantly by Quaternary age sedimentary rocks. Wisconsin Glacial Till is apparent everywhere on Long Island. This type of glacial till consists of an unstratified mix of clay, silt, and sand within a mix of rock material ranging from pebbles to giant boulders (USGS, 2003).

The present landscape of Suffolk County was formed approximately 11,000 years ago. As the glaciers receded, deposits of moraine were left behind on the island. The terminal moraine is represented by two ridges that extend the length of Long Island. The southern portion of Long Island consists of an older moraine, the Ronkonkoma moraine. The northern portion of Long Island consists of a younger moraine, Harbor Hill moraine, found along Long Island Sound. Outwash sand and gravel deposits cover much of southern Long Island. Varved lake clays and swamp peat cover areas flooded by lakes that formed in lowland regions shortly after the glaciers receded (Fagin, 2007).

The topography of Suffolk County and Long Island is relatively flat. Elevations in Suffolk County range from 0 feet above sea level along the south shore coast of the Atlantic Ocean to nearly 400 feet above sea level in the central and northern parts of Suffolk County. The coast provides approximately 1,000 miles of shoreline. The north shore is characterized by headlands that have been steeply eroded into nearly vertical bluffs that reach almost 100 feet high in certain locations. Along the south shore, waves and ocean currents reworked the deposits to form barrier beaches (Bennington, 2005; Wieder, 2007).

Hydrography and Hydrology

Numerous ponds, lakes, creeks, extensive bays, and frontages on the Long Island Sound and Atlantic Ocean make up the waterscape of Suffolk County. The major waterways within Suffolk County include: the Peconic River, Nissequogue River, Carlls River, Patchogue River, Swan River, Wading River, Carmans River, Great Peconic Bay, Little Peconic Bay, Napeague Bay, Gardiners Bay, Shinnecock Bay, Narrow Bay, Great South Bay, Smithtown Bay, Shelter Island Sound, Long Island Sound, Block Island Sound, and the Atlantic Ocean. All of these water bodies are a part of the Long Island Watershed, which Suffolk County is a part of.

The Long Island Watershed covers more than 16,000 square miles in six different states and a small portion of Quebec, Canada. An estimated 8 million people live within this watershed (Green-CT, 2002). In Suffolk County, the Long Island Sound Watershed is broken into the North and South. The South Long Island Watershed consists of 625 miles of streams and has a drainage area of 1,961 square miles. Eighteen major water bodies comprise this watershed in both Nassau and Suffolk Counties. The North Long Island Watershed consists of 52 miles of streams and has a drainage area of 912 square miles (New York State-DEC, 1998).

Precipitation is the source of all naturally occurring fresh groundwater and surface water in Suffolk County. All drinking water on Long Island comes from underground sources. The groundwater reservoir of Suffolk County is made up of aquifers and there are three major aquifers found beneath Suffolk County. The three main water-bearing units on Long Island, New York—the upper glacial aquifer (water table) and the underlying Magothy and Lloyd aquifers—are the sole source of water supply for more than 3 million people. The deepest aquifer is the Lloyd Aquifer, and it contains water that is up to several thousand years old. The middle aquifer is called the Magothy Aquifer, and it contains water that is up to 1,000 years old in its deepest layers underlying the south shore. This is the largest aquifer and the primary source of public water supply for Suffolk County. The shallowest aquifer is called the Upper Glacial Aquifer (Suffolk County WA, 2002).

The relative abundance of fresh groundwater on Long Island has allowed extensive growth and development. About 3.1 million people on Long Island rely on water pumped from about 1,000 public supply wells that withdraw about 400 million gallons per day (Mgal/d) from the ground-water reservoir (Nemickas et al., 1989).

Climate

The climate of New York State is very similar to most of the Northeast United States and is classified as Humid Continental. Differences in latitude, character of topography, and proximity to large bodies of water all have an effect on the climate across New York State. Precipitation during the warm, growing season (April through September) is characterized by convective storms that generally form in advance of an eastward moving cold front or during periods of local atmospheric instability. Occasionally, tropical cyclones will move up from southern coastal areas and produce large quantities of rain. Both types of storms typically are characterized by relatively short periods of intense precipitation that produce large amounts of surface runoff and little recharge (Cornell, Date Unknown).

The cool season (October through March) is characterized by large, low-pressure systems that move northeastward along the Atlantic coast or the western side of the Appalachian Mountains. Storms that form in these systems are characterized by long periods of steady precipitation in the form of rain, snow, or ice, and tend to produce less surface runoff and more recharge than the summer storms because they have a longer duration and occasionally result in snowmelt (Cornell, Date Unknown).

Long Island's climate is similar to other coastal areas of the Northeast. Summers are typically warm, with an occasional thunderstorm. Sea breezes off the Atlantic Ocean temper the heat and limit the frequency and severity of thunderstorms. During the winter, temperatures are usually warmer than inland areas, sometimes bringing rain instead of snow. Measurable snow falls every winter, including Nor'Easters which produce blizzard conditions. These Nor'Easters can bring one to two feet of snow with near-hurricane force winds (LongIsland.com, Date Unknown).

According to an article published by the Weather Channel on February 25, 2013 Scientists say the Long Island of the future will have shorter, wetter winters and oppressively hot summers, with seas rising and storm surges so strong they will threaten beaches, salt water marshes and infrastructure. The warnings are familiar, but after Superstorm Sandy, policymakers are listening -- and the experts' predictions are helping define what needs to be done.

"Sandy is the tipping point of response to climate change in our region," said Cynthia Rosenzweig, senior research scientist with the NASA Goddard Institute for Space Studies at Columbia University. "It's like we were in low gear and now we've moved to high gear." Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo has named three commissions to "rethink and redesign" infrastructure. President Barack Obama, in his State of the Union address, said the nation should heed "the overwhelming judgment of science and act before it's too late."

Children born this century will see and feel a significant shift in the region in their lifetime, according to a 26-member panel in their October 2011 ClimAid Report. The document -- commissioned by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority -- was crafted by scientists and researchers from the NASA Goddard Institute, Columbia University, the Institute for Sustainable Cities at the City University of New York, the Northeast Regional Climate Center at Cornell University, the New York State Water Resources Institute, MIT, New York University and Rutgers, among others. They used 16 global climate models for their temperature and precipitation projections and seven for sea level rise.

Among their findings, New York State could see a 1- to 5-inch sea level rise by the 2020s, 5 to 12 inches by the 2050s and 8 to 23 inches by the 2080s, compared with a 2000-2004 base period, depending on how much greenhouse gas emissions are limited in the meantime.

That rise would leave low-lying places such as parts of Freeport and Mastic underwater near the end of the century, according to Jay Tanski, a Stony Brook University scientist. Even a moderate nor'easter would bring significant surges because the ocean would already be swollen, ClimAID scientists said.

The rate of sea level rise could be greater -- up to 10 inches by the 2020s, 29 inches by the 2050s and 55 inches by the 2080s -- if there is significant melting of the polar ice sheets -- a phenomenon, the scientist said. Some researchers say that polar phenomenon is under way. "It could be a whole new geography," said Vivien Gornitz, a sea-level expert at Columbia who helped craft the report.

The East Coast of the United States will experience some of the greatest sea level rise in the world because its land is sinking by about a millimeter per year -- about 3 inches by 2080 -- from both human and natural geologic causes. Rising tides will mean more coastal erosion and further endanger our wetlands, which help buffer the region from severe storms and filter out certain pollutants as water moves from the land to the sea. "If high tides become higher, they cause some of the wetlands to become open bodies of water," said Paul Kirshen, research professor at the Institute for the Study of Earth, Oceans and Space at the University of New Hampshire. More saltwater intrusion would bring a higher threat of flooding and contamination, he said. Average annual precipitation is projected to increase up to 5 percent by the 2020s, up to 10 percent by the 2050s and up to 15 percent by the 2080s, the ClimAID scientists found.

Temperatures across the state are expected to rise 1.5 to 3 degrees Fahrenheit by the 2020s, 3 to 5.5 degrees by the 2050s and 4 to 9 degrees by the 2080s compared with a 1970-1999 base period, ClimAid found. Those increases will be tempered for New York City and the Island, but not by much. A 3- to 5-degree rise is predicted by the 2050s and 4 to 7.5 degrees by the 2080s. The mean temperature in Upton, monitored by Brookhaven National Laboratory, was 54.22 degrees Fahrenheit last year, the warmest in 63 years of data collection.

Land Use and Land Cover

Land uses in Suffolk County include: low density residential, medium density residential, high density residential, commercial, industrial, institutional, recreation and open space, agriculture, vacant, transportation, utilities, and waste handling. According to data provided by the Suffolk County Department of Planning, 27.9 percent of the land in Suffolk County was used for recreational purposes, 23.7 percent for medium density residential, 3.2 percent for transportation, 14.1 percent for low density residential 7.1 percent for vacant land, 7.3 percent for agriculture, 5.4 percent for institutional, 4.2 percent for high density residential, 3.2 percent for commercial, 2.6 percent for industrial, 1.1 percent for utilities, and 0.3 percent for waste handling (Suffolk County Department of Planning 2009).

4.1.2 Government

The counties of New York State began as entities established by the State Legislature to carry out specified functions at the local level on behalf of the State. During the 20th century, county government in New York State underwent major changes in function, form, and basic nature (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Today, the counties of New York State are no longer a subdivision of the state that primarily exists to perform state functions. Counties are now a municipal corporation with geographical jurisdictions, home rule powers and fiscal capacities to provide a wide range of services to their residents. To some extent, counties have evolved into a form of "regional" government that performs specified functions and which encompasses, but does not supersede, the jurisdictions of cities, towns and villages within its borders (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

County Charter

Until 1960, Suffolk County consisting of the ten towns of Babylon, Brookhaven, East Hampton, Huntington, Islip, Riverhead, Shelter Island, Smithtown, Southampton, and Southold, was governed by a Board of Supervisors, with each town represented by its elected supervisor. This Board was responsible for County business, and each supervisor was accountable for the affairs of their individual town government. In 1954, the Board of Supervisors appointed a committee to study alternative forms of government for the rapidly growing County. After several attempts to write a charter in 1956 and 1957 proved unsatisfactory, a group of citizens formed the Suffolk County Citizens Charter Committee in the summer of 1957. The document that was drafted became the basis for the Charter approved Suffolk County voters in 1958. Approval by the New York State Legislature followed, and the Charter went into effect on 1 January, 1960. The 1960 Charter provided for a new administrative officer, the County Executive, while retaining the Board of Supervisors as the legislative body. County administration was centralized and streamlined, and a County police department was created (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

In 1967, the Board of Supervisors enacted resolutions establishing the Suffolk County Charter Revision Commission, a group of private citizens appointed by the presiding officer of the Board of Supervisors and the County Executive. The Commission was to update the Charter so that it would meet the needs of the rapidly expanding County. The U.S. Supreme Court mandated, in 1968, that the one-man one-vote principle be applied to the County government. Therefore, the Charter Revision Commission proposed the apportionment of the County into 18 districts of equal population, and the election of one representative from each of the districts to constitute the County Legislature, replacing the Board of Supervisors (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Other important revisions accepted by the voters in 1970 included delineated and separated functions of the County Legislature and County Executive and changes in the budget and capital programs. With voter approval of the Environmental Preservation Act in 1970, it became the County's basic policy to conserve and protect its natural resources, the quality of its environment, and its natural scenic beauty, to encourage conservation of its agricultural lands, and to acquire land and waters for the County nature preserves and Historic Trust. Amendments in 1976 and subsequent years have updated this act (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

In 1972, voters approved an amendment that gave the County Planning Department the power to review and approve or deny zoning changes, variances, special permits or subdivision plans on property within 500 feet of the shoreline. In addition to those Amendments, every Local Law that is passed becomes part of the Charter. The Laws of Suffolk County includes the Charter, Administrative Code, Local Laws, Acts, Resolutions, Rules and Regulations, and Codes (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Executive Branch of County Government

Eligibility and Terms of Office

The County Executive is the chief administrative officer of County Government and is elected directly by the voters of Suffolk County. The term of office is 4 years, from and including the first day of January following election. The County Executive must: (1) be a citizen of the U.S.; (2) be a resident of the County for at least one year prior to election; (3) reside in Suffolk County during the entire term of office; and (4) devote full time to the office (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

The Governor of New York State may remove the County Executive from office in accordance with New York State Law. A vacancy in the office of the County Executive is filled by special election within 90 days after the vacancy occurs. The Chief Deputy County Executive becomes Acting County Executive, serving in the interim with full powers, should the office of the Executive become vacant (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Appointments

The County Executive has the power to appoint Deputy County Executives, who assist the Executive with major responsibilities. The County Executive designates one deputy, typically the Chief Deputy, to perform the administrative duties of the County Executive during their temporary absence or disability. If the Office of the County Executive becomes vacant other than by expiration of the term, the Chief Deputy shall become Acting County Executive with the full powers of the office until the vacancy is filled. Legislative approval is not required for Deputy appointments. Additionally, the County Executive appoints the majority of the County's departmental directors and members of County boards and commissions, some with and some without Suffolk County Legislature approval (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Duties

The County Executive serves as budget officer of the County, and is responsible for the preparation and submission of an annual Operating Budget, a Community College Budget, and a three-year Capital Budget and Program (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

The County Executive reports to the County Legislature annually, at the close of the fiscal year (January 1-December 31), on the financial and other affairs of the County. The County Executive may submit legislation to the County Legislature for review and approval and, as Executive Officer, has the power to veto resolutions. The County Executive is charged with ensuring that Federal and State laws applicable to the County, as well as local laws and resolutions of the County, are enforced (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Local Laws and Resolutions

No County law or resolution may take effect until it has been submitted to the County Executive for approval; if approved, it is then considered to be adopted. The County Executive may veto and return a local law to the County Legislature with a statement of reasons for not approving it. If not returned to the Legislature within 30 days, it becomes law. The County Legislature can over-ride an Executive veto by a vote of two-thirds of the Legislature.

Legislative Branch of County Government

Background

The Suffolk County Legislature was established in January 1970 in response to the U.S. Supreme Court's "one-man, one-vote" decision, replacing the 200-year-old Board of Supervisors. On the Board of Supervisors, the Supervisor of each of the County's 10 towns had one vote. With the establishment of the Suffolk County Legislature, the County was divided into 18 Legislative Districts, having substantially equal populations. Each Legislative District elects one member to the Legislature every two years. The Suffolk County Charter provides that, after each census, the boundaries of the Legislative Districts be redrawn, if necessary, to maintain a substantially equal distribution of population (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Qualifications of Legislators

To qualify as a legislator, one must (1) be a citizen of the U.S., (2) be a resident of Suffolk County for at least one year immediately preceding the election, and (3) reside in the district represented at the time of the nomination and throughout the entire two-year term of office. The exception to these qualifications would come in a year when redistricting took place. A sitting legislator who is redistricted out of their district could run for reelection, but would have to establish a permanent residence in the new district prior to running in the next general election. Other qualifications are determined by the Legislature and are subject to judicial review. In the case of a vacancy, a special election will be held within 90 days to fill the vacancy. Mayors of villages, supervisors of towns and members of the legislative bodies of towns and villages are not eligible to serve as members of the Suffolk County Legislature (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Power

The Suffolk County Legislature has the power to (1) organize and alter County government in accordance with the Suffolk County Charter; (2) adopt local laws and regulations for the residents of Suffolk County; (3) make appropriations, levy taxes and incur debts; (4) investigate the functioning of government; and (5) fix their own salaries. The Legislature approves the County Executive's major administrative appointments and has certain appointment powers of its own (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Presiding Officer

The Presiding Officer presides over and acts as Chair of all meetings of the Legislature and is empowered to call special sessions of the Legislature. The Presiding Officer also assigns each resolution or local law to a Standing or Special Committee of the Legislature for its review. It is the Presiding Officer's exclusive responsibility to set up the various committees of the Legislature, to define each committee's responsibilities, and appoint each committee's members and chairperson. The number of committees, their responsibilities, and chairpersons may change yearly (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Legislative Committees

In 2000, the following legislative standing committees were named: (1) Ways and Means; (2) Health; (3) Social Services; (4) Budget; (5) Veterans and Seniors; (6) Consumer Affairs and Government Operations; (7) Finance, Technology and Management Services; (8) Energy and Environment; (9) Economic Development and Education; (10) Parks, Land Acquisitions, Cultural Affairs; (11) Public Safety; (12) Public Works and Transportation. These committees may change annually (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

The Chair of each committee is appointed by the Presiding Officer. Each standing committee is generally composed of seven members. Although committee assignments are made by the Presiding Officer, a legislator may request assignment to a particular committee. Most standing committees meet at least once a month. Special committees are appointed by the Presiding Officer as deemed necessary, serving only for time necessary to complete their work (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Historic Timeline

Table 4-2 below displays the historic timeline of Suffolk County.

Table 4-2. Historic Timeline of Suffolk County

Year	Historic Event
1665	“Hempstead Convention” combines Long Island and Staten Island into a shire, called Yorkshire, thus ending Connecticut’s jurisdiction over the area.
1683	Suffolk County is organized as one of the 12 original counties in the Province of New York.
1683	Suffolk County towns send representatives to the first Provincial Assembly, which adopts the “Charter of Liberties and Privileges,” laying the foundation for the State’s present political subdivisions and governmental structure.
1777	Suffolk County representatives participate in founding New York State.
1778	Act of State Legislature provides for annual meeting of Supervisors of a county to apportion county court expenses among the towns. This is the origin of the Board of Supervisors.
1829 to 1838	State laws are passed giving specific powers to a Board of Supervisors, leading to development of the Board into a local government with legislative and administrative functions.
1938	State Constitution permits counties outside New York City to draft and adopt their own charters subject to the approval of voters.
1954	Board of Supervisors appoints committee to study alternative forms of government for Suffolk County.
1958	Suffolk County Charter is drafted and ratified by County voters.
1959	Suffolk County elects its first County Executive, H. Lee Dennison.
1960	Suffolk County Charter goes into effect and first County Executive takes office.
1967	Board of Supervisors establishes the Suffolk County Charter Revision Commission.
1970	Suffolk County legislative body is changed from 10-person Board of Supervisors to County Legislature with 18 representatives – one elected from each of the County’s new Legislative Districts, with a County Executive elected at-large.
1979	Local Law enacted provides for voter initiative to change County Law through the ballot. To date, this provision of the Law has never been used.

4.2 Population and Demographics

According to the 2010 U.S. Census, Suffolk County had a population of 1,493,350 people. Table 4-3 presents the population statistics for the County based on the 2010 Census data. While it is recognized that the overall population of Suffolk County has increased by approximately 5%, this growth is not geographically uniform throughout the County with some areas actually having experienced a decline in population, it is believed that the 2010 U.S. Census data within HAZUS-MH is sufficient and appropriate to support the risk assessment and mitigation planning efforts of this project. Further, considerations of long-term growth and seasonal population fluctuations are addressed in later parts of this subsection.

DMA 2000 requires that HMPs consider socially vulnerable populations. These populations can be more susceptible to hazard events, based on a number of factors including their physical and financial ability to react or respond during a hazard and the location and construction quality of their housing. This HMP considers two socially vulnerable population groups: (1) the elderly (persons over the age of 65) and (2) low-income (household annual income below $20,000 per year).

Note (1): The town populations exclude all associated villages and tribal nations within the town. 2000 and 2010 Census populations for the towns were calculated by subtracting their village(s) and tribal nations population from the total town Census population. The total county population does not include the tribal nations.

Note (2): Low-income population was collected using the 1999 Census Poverty statistics for individuals

Suffolk County is one of the most populated counties in New York State, ranked 4th out of the 62 counties for population density, with an average density of 1,637 per square mile (2010 U.S. Census Bureau). According to the 2000 Census, Suffolk County included 201,793 persons 65 years of age and above (13.5% of total population). The 2010 U.S. Census data indicates a total of 90,754 persons living in households below the poverty level (6%).

According to the Suffolk County Department of Planning Website and the U.S. Census, the population density of Suffolk County was 1,643 persons per square mile in 2011. The ten towns of Suffolk County vary in population size and density. Huntington, Babylon, Smithtown, Islip, and Brookhaven, located in western Suffolk County, contain 91 percent of the County’s population; yet only cover 62 percent of Suffolk County. The population density for western Suffolk County, in 2011, was 2,376 persons per square mile. In eastern Suffolk County, the population density is only 394 persons per square mile (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2013). With the predicted population increase, residential land use will increase, while other land uses, such as vacant land and agriculture land, may likely decrease over time.

Figure 4-4 through Figure 4-12 show the distribution of the general population density (persons per square mile) by Census block, elderly population density by Census block, and low-income population density by Census block in Suffolk County based on 2010 CENSUS data. The figures are organized by section and for the purposed of this plan the County has been divided up into three sections; west, central, and east

Seasonal Population

Eastern Suffolk County is comprised of the towns of Riverhead, Southold, Shelter Island, Southampton, and East Hampton. The population of eastern Suffolk County substantially increases during the summer months due to miles of coastline, the presence of seasonal homes, and tourism. The Suffolk County Department of Planning has calculated peak seasonal population estimates for all of the eastern Suffolk County communities and several other communities. These five towns have approximately 37,600 seasonal homes, which add over 167,000 residents to the year-round population. In addition, seasonal guests in year-round homes are estimated at 43,000; campers total 4,900; and lodging occupants total 21,800 at peak. The overall seasonal population adds almost 237,000 people to the year round population during the summer season (July-August) (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2010 Census, 6/30/2011).

During the summer season, the seasonal population increase differs dramatically among the five towns. In East Hampton, the peak seasonal population is estimated to be 4.4 times larger than the year-round population. East Hampton's population increases 441% from 21,457 to 94,710. Of all the villages and hamlets that makeup East Hampton, the hamlet of Napeague experiences the most dramatic increase in its seasonal population, from a year round population of 200 to 4,239 residents during the summer. The hamlet of Montauk has more seasonal homes and much more lodging than any other single community in East Hampton. Overall, East Hampton experiences the largest seasonal population increase out of all the eastern Suffolk County towns (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 06/30/2011).

Shelter Island's seasonal population increase is the second largest, at 337%. It increases from 2,392 year round to 10,448 during the summer season. Southampton has a large number of seasonal homes, causing its seasonal population to increase by 192%, from 57,421 to 167,682 persons. The North Fork, which includes Southold and Riverhead, has relatively fewer seasonal homes which makes the estimated increases not as dramatic. In Southold, the population increases by 147%, from 21,968 to 54,160 persons. Riverhead is becoming more of a year-round community and its seasonal population only increases by 41%, from 33,506 to 47,093 during peak seasonal times (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 06/30/2011).

Seasonal population estimates were also prepared for Fire Island and selected other Nassau-Suffolk communities. The most dramatic increase of any up-island area occurs in Fire Island, which has 292 year-round residents and an estimated 19,597 people at peak seasonal times. Other significant increases occur in the Fire Island incorporated villages of Ocean Beach and Saltaire (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 06/30/2011).

Other Nassau-Suffolk communities, such as Long Beach, Mastic Beach, and Rocky Point contain some seasonal homes. However, since these communities are primarily year-round in nature, some of the additional seasonal population in those communities is offset by year round residents vacationing elsewhere during those same peak times (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 06/30/2011).

In most communities, seasonal population results primarily from seasonal homes. This is particularly true in such communities as Bridgehampton, North Sea, Sagaponack, Fishers Island, and Fire Island. In Montauk, however, motels account for much of the seasonal population. In other communities, seasonal guests in year-round homes comprise much of the seasonal population (Suffolk County Department of Planning, Date Unknown).

Long Island's seasonal home concentrations continue to move eastward. The proportion of Long Island's seasonal homes located in the five eastern towns continues to increase, and the number of seasonal homes in eastern Suffolk County has noticeably risen during the past 40 years. Many of the original seasonal homes in Nassau and western Suffolk County have been converted to use year-round. As recently as 1970, significant seasonal home concentrations existed in Long Beach, Atlantic Beach, Ronkonkoma Sound Beach, Rocky Point, Wading River, Shirley, and Mastic Beach. By 1990, the seasonal home concentrations in these communities had become much less significant (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 06/30/2011). Table 4-4 shows the seasonal population in 2000 and 2010 for the five eastern Suffolk County towns. Table 4-5 shows the number of seasonal homes in 2000 and 2010 for the five eastern Suffolk County towns. It should be noted that, based on figures reported in the 2010 census, there has been a significant increase in the number of seasonal homes in the period 2000 – 2010 over the previous ten years. It is unclear as to whether this is a result in a change in the way the numbers are reported (year round vs. seasonal homes) or whether it is a combination of an increase in the number of homes combined with a decrease in the overall persons per household, This increase may be a combination of all these factors.

4.3 GENERAL BUILDING STOCK

The 2010 Census data identifies 569,985 households in Suffolk County. The Census data identifies 568,570 housing units in Suffolk County in 2010, an increase of 8.2% from 2000. Census defines household as all the persons who occupy a housing unit, and a housing unit as a house, an apartment, a mobile home, a group of rooms, or a single room that is occupied (or if vacant, is intended for occupancy) as separate living quarters. Therefore, you may have more than one household per housing unit. The median price owner occupied housing unit in Suffolk County was estimated at $395,200 by the 2010 U.S. Census.

Based on the data collected from the Suffolk County Planning Department, and the Suffolk County Real Property Tax Service, there are 617,436 structures in Suffolk County, with a total building replacement value (structure and content) of $702 billion. Approximately 93% of the buildings and 68% of the building stock structural value are associated with residential housing. Table 4-6 presents Building Stock Statistics by Occupancy Class for Suffolk County, based on the Suffolk County Planning Department, and the Suffolk County Real Property Tax Service provided data.

Note: RCV = Replacement value. The values for the town include the building stock for their village(s). Exposure value reflects the replacement cost for building structure and contents. Generally, contents for residential structures are valued at about 50 percent of the building's value. For commercial facilities, the value of the content is generally about equal to the building's structural value.

The 2010 Census identified that the majority of housing units (85.8%) in Suffolk County are single family detached or attached units. The 2010 U.S. Census Bureau's County Business Patterns data updated by the Suffolk County Planning Department (5/13/2013) identified 47,668 business establishments employing 538,635 people in Suffolk County. The majority (65%) of these establishments employed between one and fifteen employees.

Custom general building stock inventory was generated for Suffolk County using the building footprint spatial layer provided by Suffolk County Department of Planning, the parcel spatial layer provided by Suffolk County Real Property Tax Service and building attributes provided by many of the plan participants. The structure replacement cost value was calculated for each building using the area of the building and 2014 RS Means values for all occupancy types with a regional factor of 1.8 applied.

Figure 4-13 through Figure 4-20 show the updated building distribution and exposure density of residential, commercial and industrial buildings in Suffolk County organized by participating jurisdictions. Exposure density is the dollar value of structures per unit area, including building content value. Generally, contents for residential structures are valued at about 50 percent of the building's value. For commercial facilities, the value of the content is generally about equal to the building's structural value. The densities are shown in units of dollars per square mile.

Viewing exposure distribution maps such as Figure 4-13 through Figure 4-20 can assist communities in visualizing areas of high exposure and in evaluating aspects of the study area in relation to the specific hazard risks.

4.4 Land Use and Population Trends

In New York State, land use regulatory authority is vested in towns, villages, and cities. However, many development and preservation issues transcend local political boundaries. In Suffolk County, each town and village is empowered by the Municipal Home Rule Law to plan and zone within its boundaries (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2000). DMA 2000 requires that communities consider land use trends, which can impact the need for, and priority of, mitigation options over time. Land use trends can also significantly impact exposure and vulnerability to various hazards. For example, significant development in a hazard area increases the building stock and population exposed to that hazard.

This Plan provides a general overview of population and land use trends and types of development occurring within the study area. An understanding of these development trends can assist in planning for further development and ensuring that appropriate mitigation, planning, and preparedness measures are in place to protect human health and community infrastructure.

4.4.1 Development Trends

In November of 2008, Suffolk County Planning Department released a report entitled Demographic, Economic and Development Trends. In that report, the County documented the following seven development trends:

- The Suffolk County office market is stable, with a 15.8% vacancy rate in more than 24 million square feet of buildings.
- The industrial market in Suffolk County is very strong. Its 4.4% vacancy rate is among the lowest in the nation, in 91 million square feet of industrial buildings.
- There are 12,200 hotel and motel rooms in Suffolk County, with more than 1,500 rooms added since 2003. Occupancy rates have remained steady at 74% since 2006.
- Suffolk County has 39 million square foot of space in planned shopping centers, and 8 million square feet of space in its downtowns, many of which continue to emerge as strong dining and entertainment centers.
- More than 5 million square feet of retail space has been added in Suffolk County since 2000.
- Current and future engines of growth in Suffolk County are located in the Pilgrim State Hospital area in Brentwood, Central Islip, Route 58 in Riverhead, Calverton Airport in Riverhead, and Yaphank.
- As of 2007 there were 1.2 million registered vehicles in Suffolk County, 2.44 vehicles for every household.

4.4.2 Land Use Trends

According to the Suffolk County Department of Planning, land use is categorized as low density residential, medium density residential, high density residential, commercial, industrial, institutional, recreational and open space, agriculture, vacant, transportation, utilities, and waste handling. Open space, vacant land, commercial, industrial, and agricultural land uses are further discussed below.

Over the last 15 years, there has been a reduction in the amount of vacant and agricultural land and increases in the amount in all other land use categories. If vacant land, agricultural land, and land used for recreation, conservation and open space is excluded, all of the other land uses only account for half of the property on Long Island. Therefore, only half of Long Island can be classified as developed (Long Island Regional Planning Board, 1982).

Most commercial and industrial development is concentrated near North Amityville, Deer Park, and Ronkonkoma with considerable development along the Long Island Expressway in communities such as Melville and Hauppauge. There are a number of wetland areas and significant water bodies, which include the Atlantic Ocean, Long Island Sound, Great South Bay, and Great Peconic Bay. The largest wetland areas are in the Connetquot River State Park Preserve, along the Camans River, in Makamah County Nature Preserve and in Conscience Point National Wildlife Refuge.

Open Space

Per the Suffolk County Department of Planning, open space includes forests and agricultural land, undeveloped shorelines, undeveloped scenic lands, public and private parks, and preserves. It also includes water bodies, such as bays, lakes, and streams (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2005). In 2000, open space covered 23.4% of Suffolk County land (Long Island Index, 2004). With a rapid population growth, there is a demand for open space preservation, which will continue to support the tourist industry and water quality in Suffolk County (Newsday.com, 2007). In 1999, 83,000 acres of land in the five eastern Suffolk County jurisdictions were available for development. In western Suffolk County, there was far less land available for open space acquisitions, which makes it critical to acquire any such land before Suffolk County is completely built-out. According to the document “Open Space Acquisition Policy Plan for Suffolk County”, prepared by the Department of Planning, with present funding levels, Suffolk County has the ability to purchase thousands of acres for open space preservation (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2007).

Source: Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2003

Vacant Land

In 2006, vacant, undeveloped land comprised 12 percent (69,740 acres) of land use in Suffolk County (Suffolk County Fire, Rescue and Emergency Services, 2006). Vacant land includes any undeveloped residential lots and land. It also includes abandoned agricultural land and rural land, vacant land in commercial areas, vacant land in industrial areas, urban renewal or slum clearance, and private and wild forest lands (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2004).

Commercial Land

In 2006, commercial properties comprised approximately 6.2 percent (36,013 acres) of Suffolk County (Suffolk County Fire, Rescue and Emergency Services, 2006). These commercial properties include hotels and motels; camps, cottages, and bungalows; inns, lodges, rooming houses, etc.; dining establishments; motor vehicle services; retail services; bank and office buildings; entertainment businesses; sports assemblies; amusement facilities; indoor and out sports facilities; marinas; resort complexes; and professional associations (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2008 Demographic, Economic and Development Trends). Suffolk County contains more than 24 million square feet of private office buildings, with a proposed 2.4 million of additional square feet to be added in the future. With such extensive industrial, office, and tourist markets, hotels, motels, and bed and breakfast inns can be found throughout Suffolk County. Currently, Suffolk County has 319 hotels and motels, which contain over 12,200 rooms. Suffolk County is a major retail market, with $30 billion in retail sales in 2007. According to Trade Dimensions International, Suffolk County had retail sales per household of $60,588, ranking among the highest in the country. According to the Suffolk County Department of Planning, Suffolk County's shopping center space totals 39.2 million square feet. This includes more than 5.3 million square feet of new shopping center space added in Suffolk County between 2000 and 2008. In addition, Suffolk County's traditional downtown centers contain 8 million square feet of store space.

Industrial Land

Industrial properties comprised only 0.6 percent (3,209 acres) of land use in Suffolk County for 2006 (Suffolk County Fire, Rescue and Emergency Services, 2006). Industrial properties include storage, warehouse and distribution facilities; gasoline, fuel, oil, liquid petroleum storage and/or distribution; bottled gas, natural gas facilities; grain and feed elevators, mixers, sales, outlets; lumber yards, sawmills; coal yards, bins; cold storage facilities; trucking terminals; piers, wharves, docks, and related facilities; junkyards; manufacturing and processing; mining and quarrying; and industrial product pipelines. Suffolk County contains significant industrial space. According to Grubb & Ellis, there is 91 million square feet of industrial square footage in Suffolk County, nearly two-thirds of the industrial space on Long Island. Most of the space is general industrial space, but a large portion is warehouse and distribution space and a significant smaller portion is R&D/flex space. East Farmingdale contains a large amount of older industrial space. The largest concentration of industrial space in Suffolk County is located in Hauppauge. A significant industrial corridor has emerged in the Veterans Highway area near MacArthur Airport in Ronkonkoma and Bohemia. Further east, significant new industrial space continues to be developed in the Yaphank area.

Agricultural Land

In 2006, agricultural land made up 0.5 percent (2,870 acres) of Suffolk County (Suffolk County Fire, Rescue and Emergency Services, 2006). This percentage includes any productive agricultural vacant land, livestock and products, field crops, truck crops, orchard crops, nursery and greenhouses, and specialty farms (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2004). In 2002, Suffolk County was the leading agriculture-producing county in New York State, with total sales of $201 million, which is a 9.7 percent increase since 1997. The leading products sold included nursery and greenhouse, vegetables, poultry and eggs, fruits and nuts, and aquaculture (Figure 4-23) (NY Agricultural Statistics Service, 2003).

Source: NY Agricultural Statistics Service, 2003

Even though Suffolk County’s agriculture sales have increased, Suffolk County has experienced a decrease in total farm acreage. In 2002, 651 farms (with 34,127 acres) were identified by the USDA, compared to 725 farms (with 35,858 acres) in 1997 (Office of the State Comptroller, 2006). Farmland acreage in Suffolk County is decreasing by 1,400 acres each year, due to population growth and demands for residential space (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2005).

According to the New York Agricultural Statistics Service, in 2003 there were 34,000 acres in farms in Suffolk County, representing 6% of the County’s total acreage. This included 645 farms averaging 53 acres per farm. Suffolk County ranks 27th in New York State for the number of farms and 50th for land (acreage) in farms (New York Agricultural Statistics Service, 2003). Over the last forty years, farmland in Suffolk County has decreased. This trend can be seen in Table 4-7 and Figure 4-24.

4.4.3 Population Trends

This section discusses population trends to use as a basis for estimating future changes that could result from the seasonal character of the population and significantly change the character of the area. Population trends can provide a basis for making decisions on the type of mitigation approaches to consider and the locations in which these approaches should be applied. This information can also be used to support planning decisions regarding future development in vulnerable areas.

In 1900, the U.S. Census placed Suffolk County’s population at 77,582 and by 1920, its population reached 110,134. More than 20 years later, during World War II, residential construction came to a standstill. During this time, there were sizable shifts in population. These shifts were largely due to many people who had been mobilized into the Armed Forces. The end of the war brought demobilization and with that, many new families started, leading to a post-war construction boom. Many areas on Long Island, including Suffolk County, saw a rapid increase in population. A steady increase in population was seen through the 1980s. Between 1980 and 1990, the population gain was small compared to previous years. By 1990 and into 2000, the population started to flourish once again. By January 1, 2006, the combined population of Nassau and Suffolk Counties totaled 2.85 million persons (LIPA, 2006).

Table 4-8 and Figure 4-25 depict the past, current, and project population statistics/trends for Suffolk County.

Source: U.S. Census Bureau, 2006

The U.S. Census Bureau calculated the 2010 population for Suffolk County to be 1,493,350. This is an increase of 73,981 from the 2000 population. Every jurisdiction experienced an overall increase in their population from 2000 to 2010. Brookhaven is Suffolk County’s most populated jurisdiction, with a 2010 population of 486,364. Riverhead experienced the greatest percent increase in its population (21.04%). Babylon saw the smallest increase in its population (0.85%).

Since 1952, Long Island Power Authority (LIPA) has provided a Population Survey for Suffolk and Nassau Counties and the Rockaway Peninsula of Queens County. The Population Surveys are derived from U.S. Census data and utility records of active residential electric meters. The Survey contains the previous year’s estimates as well as data from prior U.S. Censuses (LIPA, 2006).

LIPA’s estimated population for Suffolk County, on January 1, 2011, was 1,492,450 persons. They reported that the most recent decade from 2000 to 2010 saw a stable growth of only .04% (LIPA, 2011).

The biggest town is the town of Brookhaven with a total population of 486,568, or 32% of the County. The four other western towns, - Huntington, Babylon, Islip, and Smithtown, account for just under 60% of the population of Suffolk County with a combined total of 869,806. The town of Islip is the second biggest town of Suffolk county, with a population of 335,301. The Town of Babylon accounted for 213,565 of the total population and is the third biggest western Suffolk town. The town of Huntington is the fourth biggest with a total population of 203,055 (LIPA, 2011).

The County’s five eastern towns - Riverhead, Southampton, Southold, East Hampton, and Shelter Island accounted for about 9% of the total Suffolk County population. The combined population of the five eastern Towns is estimated to be 136,076 persons as of January 1, 2011. The town of Southampton has the largest population with a total of 56,800, whereas Shelter Island has the smallest population with a total of 2,396. Riverhead is the second largest eastern town contributing 33,455 to the total population. Southold and East Hampton have about the same population with 21,965 and 21,460 respectively. The Town of Riverhead experienced the largest percentage growth (21%) between 2000 and 2010, adding just over 5,800 people in 10 years (LIPA, 2011).

Per the Suffolk County – Comprehensive Plan 2035, Suffolk County’s population is projected to continue to increase slowly for the next 25 years. Based on current trends and a gradual reduction in the amount of vacant land available for residential development, Suffolk County’s population is projected to increase by 240,000 or 16% between 2010 and 2035. Some of this projected increase is expected to come from redevelopment. Because Nassau County has significantly less land available for development, Nassau is expected to increase in population by 98,000 or 7% between 2010 and 2035, mostly because of redevelopment. These increases are significantly greater than the increase that would occur if all available land were developed in accordance with existing zoning. These figures assume that some zoning changes will occur, consistent with recent trends. It is possible that these figures may overstate or understate the effect of potential future changes in zoning of undeveloped or redeveloped land. The table below details the expected population growth in each of Suffolk County’s ten towns between 2010 and 2035. The largest numerical increase in population is expected in the Town of Brookhaven with an addition of 108,000 persons.

Saturation population is the population which can be expected if all available land were to be developed according to existing zoning. It is estimated that Suffolk County’s saturation population would be 1.75 million persons, and this population figure may be reached by around the year 2040. The saturation population figure represents a 17% increase over the 2010 population figure for the County (Suffolk County – Comprehensive Plan 2035 Senior Citizen Population

Of special note is the fact that persons age 65 and over have been a consistently growing segment of Suffolk County’s population. In 2010, there were 201,000 persons age 65 and over in Suffolk, comprising 14% of the population. In 1990, seniors age 65 and over represented 11% of the population, up from 9% in 1980 and 8% in 1970. Between 2000 and 2010, the number age 65 and over increased by 20%, after increasing by 18% in the 1990s, by 22% in the 1980s and by 35% in the 1970s.

The 2010 census revealed that 45,000 or 23% of the County’s seniors (age 65 and over) live alone, and that 29% of Suffolk County households contain a senior citizen. These figures are even more striking in the five eastern Suffolk towns: 19% of the population is age 65 or over and 35% of all households contain a senior citizen. There are 175 multi-family housing complexes dedicated for seniors in Suffolk County. Suffolk contains more than 25,000 units of senior- dedicated housing units in condos, apartments, and co-ops.

4.5 Growth and Development

According to “A Review of Selected Growth and Development Areas” for Suffolk County, five areas were identified by the Suffolk County Department of Planning and the New York Metropolitan Transportation Council as “major growth and development areas” in the County. These five areas are: 1) Route 110 Office-Industrial Corridor; 2) Sagtikos Regional Development Zone; 3) Yaphank; 4) Town of Riverhead; and 5) Stony Brook High Tech Campus (Suffolk County Department of Planning, 2006).

The 2014 vulnerability assessment used the best available defined hazard areas, population, buildings, and facilities data. The use of these updated data sets (e.g., 2010 Census population, updated general building stock based on recent County assessor’s data, updated critical facilities) and hazard areas (e.g., DFIRMs) provide an update in changes in vulnerability to population and development since the 2008 Plan.

This Section provides a detailed overview of the land use, development, transportation, economy, and population trends within the County. This section, as well as federal, state and local laws and regulations that impact development in hazard prone areas described in the Capability Assessment of Section 6 (Mitigation Strategy) and the jurisdictional annexes in Section 9, served as the basis for the assessment of changes in jurisdictions and in development that may impact vulnerability by either increasing or decreasing risk. Additional discussion on changes in development for jurisdictions in hazard prone areas may be found in Sections 5.4.1 through 5.4.13 (Vulnerability Assessment subsections).

Building codes and land use regulations, along with local site plan review processes, described in Section 6 and specifically identified within the Capability Assessment of each jurisdictional annex (Section 9), limit development in hazard areas or require construction to meet higher standards within hazard areas. This results in no increase in overall vulnerability in the case of new development, and may provide a reduction of risk in areas where redevelopment is occurring.

Table 4-9 describes additional areas of major development (i.e., building and infrastructure), if any, identified by participating jurisdictions of this Plan. Please refer to the jurisdictional annexes in Section 9 which identifies known hazard zones within these development areas.

Village of Belle Terre	The Village of Belle Terre does not have any major subdivisions or infrastructures planned within the next five years that would impact mitigation planning.
Village of Bellport	The Village of Bellport does not have any major subdivisions for residential/commercial development or major infrastructures planned within the next five years.
Village of Lake Grove	The only major residential development identified at this time is an approved 74 lot subdivision of which only 37 homes are built. There are no other large residential parcels available for development. Commercially, there is only one six-acre parcel remaining in the village which would accommodate 50,000-square feet of retail space. At this time, there is no application on file with the village.
Village of Old Field	There is one 15+ acre parcel that includes lowland abutting LI coastal dunes that may be subdivided in the future.
Village of Poquott	The Incorporated Village of Poquott is fully developed with the majority of the land taken up with single family homes and several Village Parks. There are no commercial properties permitted within the Village. All final build out could include the possible subdivision of two large estates which would allow for the possibility of an additional 10 – 12 homes (currently not submitted).
Village of Port Jefferson	The Village is currently entertaining options of building residential about 40 units in 2 specific locations. The village has also taken preliminary steps in initiative a Village Redevelopment Plan, which could lead to building additional residential units and commercial units on the main (street) level.
Village of Shoreham	There are less than 8 parcels of land are available for single residences. No other development is anticipated.
Town of East Hampton	Measures have already been taken to provide affordable housing for senior residents and the work force employees, and plans to construct the new Green Hollow Affordable Housing subdivision have been approved. The Town, in an effort to retain open space and maintain the rural character of East Hampton, regularly purchases properties that will remain vacant, or forego further development.

4.6 CRITICAL FACILITIES

A comprehensive inventory of critical facilities in the County was developed from various sources including input from the Planning Committee, Suffolk County and participating municipal departments, utility companies, and HAZUS-MH provided data. The inventory of critical facilities presented in this section represents the current state of this effort at the time of publication of the HMP and was used for the risk assessment in Section 5.

Critical Facilities are those facilities considered critical to the health and welfare of the population and that are especially important following a hazard. As defined for this HMP, critical facilities include essential facilities, transportation systems, lifeline utility systems, high-potential loss facilities, and hazardous material facilities.

Essential facilities are a subset of critical facilities that include those facilities that are important to ensure a full recovery following the occurrence of a hazard event. For the County risk assessment, this category was defined to include police, fire, EMS, schools/colleges, shelters, senior facilities, and medical facilities.

4.6.1 Essential Facilities

This section provides information on emergency facilities, hospital and medical facilities, shelters, schools, and senior care and living facilities.

Emergency Facilities

Suffolk County Police Departments

The Suffolk County Police Department (Suffolk County PD) is made up of over 2,500 sworn officers and 500 civilian members. The workforce is divided into seven (7) precincts that provide police services for the five (5) western towns in Suffolk County (Babylon, Brookhaven, Huntington, Islip and Smithtown). Each of the precincts provides all police services for their respective areas. A central police headquarters is located in Yaphank which provides administrative and support services to each of the seven precincts. The training of all police and law enforcement personnel in the county is provided and coordinated by the Suffolk County Police Department in county facilities in Brentwood.

In addition to the Suffolk County PD, law enforcement and police services are also provided by eight (8) incorporated villages within the five (5) western towns. Police services in the five (5) eastern towns of Suffolk County (East Hampton, Riverhead, Shelter Island, Southampton and Southold) are provided by eleven (11) independent town and village police forces that work in concert with each other and Suffolk County PD as required. The working relationships between the all of the different police departments in Suffolk County ensures that the appropriate resources are directed where and when they are needed. The Suffolk County PD has the most capabilities of all of the police forces in the county and makes its resources readily available as particular needs are identified.

The Suffolk County PD has approximately 2,100 officers that are trained in EMT-D. It also possesses capabilities for aviation and Med-Evac services for the entire county. The county force has additional capabilities in a wide variety of areas which include, but are not limited to, emergency services, Haz-Mat requirements, bomb and explosive devices, marine and coastal beach requirements, canine functions, and coordinated regional criminal intelligence needs to name a few.

Suffolk County Fire Departments

Fire protection in Suffolk County is almost entirely provided by volunteers in 109 fire departments that operate under and are governed by an area fire district. Figure 4-58 illustrates the fire districts in Suffolk County. Typically, a fire district is run by five (5) publicly elected unpaid officials. Fire districts, similar to towns and villages, are a local form of government created pursuant to state statutes. They have the power and authority to provide fire protection services within their boundaries and to levy taxes and incur debt to accomplish that responsibility. One fire district has no higher authority over another nor can it be superseded in authority by a village, town, county or the state government.

In addition to the volunteer departments there are several instances where fire protection service is provided by contract to a village or township, however this is not the norm in Suffolk County. Additionally, there are seven (7) unique career fire agencies that provide services to the three (3) state or local owned airports, the three (3) federal facilities and one (1) utility power station. Again this is not the norm in Suffolk County.

The latest estimates indicate that there are approximately 11,900 volunteer firefighters in Suffolk County that operate a combined 1,500 pieces of firefighting equipment. This equipment ranges from the typical engine, ladder truck and rescue vehicle to the more specialized vehicles used for off-road fighting of brush fires, performing technical rescue services and shoreline travel on boardwalks and beaches.

Basic and advanced firefighting training is offered through the Suffolk County Fire Academy operated by the Vocational Education and Extension Board under contract with the Suffolk County Department of Fire, Rescue and Emergency Services. The training takes the form of year-round classroom instruction at fire stations and the Fire Academy in Yaphank. Live fire training is also conducted at the academy operated training center, also in Yaphank, which operates nearly every weekday evening and on weekends from April 1 through November 30.

Source: Suffolk County GIS

Alarm receipt and dispatch is varied and ranges from individual fire departments handling a call to Public Safety Answering Points (PSAPs) or neighboring fire districts providing dispatch services and/or alarm communications. The vast majority of fire departments utilize tone alert pagers or radios in the low band radio spectrum. Typically neighboring fire departments share each other's operating frequencies for interoperability purposes. Additionally, each fire department has at least one portable radio that can operate on Suffolk County's 800 MHZ trunked radio system for use during local and regional events emergencies and disasters.

The overwhelming majority of alarm calls are handled by the local fire agency having jurisdiction. However, mutual aid agreements exist on the state, county and local levels to provide for additional resources should the agency having jurisdiction require it. In some instances, mutual aid is automatically provided by prior agreements for structure fires during certain time frames or for high risk facilities. In all instances the highest ranking officer of the agency having jurisdiction is in command of any fire or emergency.

Emergency Medical Services

Emergency Medical Services (EMS) in Suffolk County are provided through a number of different entities. There are 100 separate ambulance services in the county comprised almost entirely of volunteers. This total consists of sixty-nine (69) local fire departments which provide EMS services, twenty-seven (27) independent Volunteer Ambulance Companies, and four (4) additional dedicated entities providing services to specific places such as Brookhaven National Laboratory. All of these entities provide emergency medical services; however they are governed and structured in different fashions

The Fire Department based EMS services are a function within the volunteer fire departments and fall under the responsibilities of each fire districts publicly elected unpaid governing Commission. Fire districts, similar to towns and villages, are a local form of government created pursuant to state statutes. They have the power and authority to provide fire protection and emergency medical services within their boundaries and to levy taxes and incur debt to accomplish those responsibilities. One fire district has no higher authority over another nor can it be superseded in authority by a village, town, county or the state government.

An independent volunteer Ambulance Company is typically run by three (3) publicly elected unpaid officials. Ambulance Improvement Districts unlike fire districts cannot levy taxes or incur debt to pay for their responsibilities and needs. Instead, they establish contracts with their local municipalities for funding, and it is the municipality which has the ability to levy taxes and incur debt to provide for the EMS service. The individual Ambulance Companies have responsibility for emergency medical services within their respective boundaries, and work in conjunction with other ambulance companies, fire departments and police as necessary to ensure that the appropriate resources are directed where and when they are needed.

The other dedicated EMS entities are salaried functions unlike the volunteer structure in the fire departments and ambulance companies. This fact does not affect the ability to work in conjunction with the fire departments and independent ambulance companies as particular needs arise.

The emergency medical service functions in Suffolk County include both Basic Life Support (BLS) and Advanced Life Support (ALS) capabilities. The advanced life support capability entails specialized training in the administration of medications and the performance of life saving measures in the field. The combined Suffolk County EMS capability consists of seventeen (17) agencies of BLS and eighty three (83) agencies of ALS. In total, there are two hundred thirty seven (237) ambulance vehicles and six (6) common carriers available within the county to respond to emergency situations as needed.

The Suffolk County Division of Emergency Medical Services within the Department of Health Services has the responsibility for the administration and oversight of Suffolk's emergency medical services system and the training and certification of EMS personnel. The Division also has the responsibility for the overall coordination of the emergency system and the development of support services to aid in improving all phases of emergency medical care.

4.6.2 Transportation Systems

This section discusses transportation systems including: highways and highway bridges, bus service, railroads, airports, and marine services.

Highways and Highway Bridges

Suffolk County is located within New York State Department of Transportation Region 10 area which encompasses both Nassau and Suffolk Counties. Suffolk County maintains over 420 miles of County roads, 140 bridges, culverts and miscellaneous structures, 300 waterways and operates 730 traffic signals. Suffolk County is responsible for snow removal on County roads only. The Suffolk County Department of Public Works constructs, maintains and operates County properties and designs, constructs and maintains County roads, sewerage systems, buildings and other facilities, such as waterways, bridges, docks and marinas (Suffolk County Public Works, 2007). Based on input from Suffolk County GIS and the Planning Committee, there are over 600 highway bridges in the County. Table 4-17 lists Suffolk County maintained roads. Figure 4-29 shows major transportation roadways in Suffolk County.

Interstate 495 also referred to as the Long Island Expressway, runs west to east across Long Island from Queens to Riverhead in Suffolk County. There are six State Parkways that traverse the County which include Heckscher, Northern State, Robert Moses, Saktigos, Southern State and Sunken Meadow. According to Suffolk County GIS Department roads data, there are 40.9 miles of Interstate, 49.6 miles of State Parkway, 357.8 miles of State Highway, and 104.41 miles of County Roads in the County. Additionally, the Ram Island First, Ram Island Second and Shell Beach Causeways are critical to Shelter Island’s highway infrastructure.

According to Suffolk County Fire Rescue and Emergency Services (FRES) and input from the Planning Committee, there are 602 highway bridges in the County. HAZUS-MH only identifies 354 state and county-owned highway bridges in the County with a default replacement value totaling over $7 billion.

The Comprehensive All-Hazards Emergency Management Plan for Suffolk County (March 2005) identifies the most essential routes for evacuating vulnerable populations. These routes are: (1) Route 25 and Cross River Drive intersection, east of Riverhead; (2) Sunrise Highway (Route 27) and North Sea Road intersection, Southampton; (3) Route 111 (Islip Avenue) and Southern State Parkway interchange; (4) Nugent Road and West Main Street interchanges with Long Island Expressway, west of Riverhead; (5) Montauk Highway (Route 27), east of Southampton; (6) Wellwood Avenue and Sunrise Highway (Route 27), north of Lindenhurst; and Ferry service out of Fire Island. Additionally, according to the Town of Babylon, the Town of Babylon's evacuation routes, which run from south to north, are: (1) Broadway/New York State Route 110; (2) Great Neck Road (CR 47); (3) Straight Path (CR2); (4) Little East Neck Road; and (5) Deer Park Avenue/New York State Route 231. It is important to note that Montauk Highway and Sunrise Highway are both within a geographical area most at risk to coastal storms.

Bus

Long Island Bus, a part of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA), provides bus service throughout western Suffolk County. Suffolk County Transit also provides public bus service throughout Suffolk County. Additionally, Suffolk County Accessible Transportation (Suffolk CountyAT) provides curb-to-curb service to individuals with disabilities and the Huntington Area Rapid Transit (HART) also provides public bus service. Table 4-18 lists the bus facilities in Suffolk County.

Railroad

The MTA Long Island Rail Road (LIRR), a subsidiary of New York State's MTA, is the busiest commuter railroad in North America, carrying an average of 282,400 customers each weekday on 728 daily trains throughout Long Island. Third-rail electric service is offered on the lines to Babylon, Huntington, Port Washington, and Ronkonkoma, and diesel service is provided on the lines to Port Jefferson, Montauk and Greenport (MTA online, accessed 2007). The LIRR Babylon Branch, within the Town of Babylon, is elevated an average of 20 feet above surrounding grade. From the Babylon/Islip Town boundary to the Village of Lindenhurst, the tracks sit on a solid earthen structure (Feitner, 2007). Table 4-19 and Table 4-20 inventory the railroad facilities and bridges in Suffolk County.

Access to Shelter Island is limited to transportation by ferry, private boat, or private airplane. According to the Shelter Island Comprehensive Plan, its two private air strips do not accommodate commercial service and only a small amount of the population accesses the island via air. The North and South Ferries provide the main transportation link to Shelter Island. North Ferry runs from Shelter Island Heights to Greenport in the Town of Southold and South Ferry runs from Shelter Island to North Haven in the Town of Southampton. These are private ferries that are publicly regulated; these firms transport both passengers and automobiles. Ferry traffic increased 40% from 1982 to 1992, transporting nearly one million automobiles on/off the island in 1992 (Shelter Island, 1994). Because Shelter Island relies so heavily on marine transportation, anchorages and dockage were also identified as crucial to their transportation inventory (Table 4-24).

4.6.3 Lifeline Utility Systems

Lifelines include utility services and infrastructure that provide water, power, and other necessary services to residents. Due to heightened security concerns, some location information for lifelines is not provided in the plan, although the number of facilities and their general location is considered (as data are available). Additionally, because the majority of power supply lines are privately held, this information is generally difficult to obtain and is not for public release. However, consideration of the utilities in the area is presented below to support the risk assessment in Section 5.

Potable Water Supply

Long Island's groundwater system is a federally-designated "sole source" aquifer. Additionally, the area is also identified as a Primary Water Supply Aquifer by New York State Department of Health (1981) and New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (1987) (EPA, 2007). EPA defines a sole-source aquifer as an aquifer that supplies 50-percent or more of the drinking water for an area. The recharge in the area is 990 million gallons per day (MGD). The total capacity of the aquifers underlying Suffolk County is about 70 trillion gallons. Most of this water is returned to the aquifer with consumptive loss estimated at 95 MGD. The consumptive loss is through pumping, personal use, sewage systems, marine discharges and evapotranspiration associated with irrigation and lawn sprinkling (Earth Science Educational Resource Center, Date Unknown).

The Suffolk County Water Authority (Suffolk CountyWA) services a majority of Suffolk County's population. According to the 2007 Annual Drinking Water Quality Report, Suffolk CountyWA serves over 1.1 million customers in the County. Suffolk CountyWA maintains 621 wells that pump water from the Long Island Aquifer (Suffolk CountyWA, 2007). In addition to SWCA, a portion of the Town of Babylon (7,500 people) is serviced by the East Farmingdale Water District (Feitner and Hanse, 2006; LI Water Conference, accessed online 2007). The Riverhead Water District services the Town of Riverhead. The Riverhead Water District maintains thirteen (13) wells that are drilled into the Glacial and Magothy aquifers (Riverhead Water District, 2006). The Town of Huntington is served by Suffolk CountyWA, Dix Hills Water District, Greenlawn Water District, and South Huntington Water District. The Town of Smithtown is served by Suffolk CountyWA, Brentwood Water District, St. James Water District, and Smithtown Water District (LI Water Conference, accessed online 2007). There are three public water supply systems on Shelter Island: Shelter Island Heights, West Neck (approximately 60 home) and Dering Harbor (approximately 20 homes). The remainder of the population relies upon “on-site facilities” (Shelter Island, 1994; Card, 2007).

There are approximately 77,000 individual private wells serving over 200,000 people in Suffolk County. The Suffolk County Department of Health Services operates an extensive water testing program to help residents with private wells determine the quality of their drinking (Suffolk County Department of Health Services, accessed online 2007).

Wastewater Facilities

According to Suffolk County GIS data, there are 25 sewer districts in Suffolk County. Table 4-25 lists the wastewater treatment facilities in the County and Table 4-28 lists the wastewater pumps or lift stations in the County. The wastewater treatment facilities’ replacement value is the default value provided in HAZUS-MH. This default value may be overestimating the replacement cost for several of the smaller plants listed. Please note several of the pump/lift stations have identical names (e.g., there are five Pump Station #1’s in the Town of Brookhaven). Although they are assigned the same name, each station has a different physical address.

In Sewer District 3, in southwestern Suffolk County, the Suffolk County Department of Public Works maintains a 72-inch ocean outfall that disposes treated sewage from the Towns of Babylon and Islip 2.5 miles into the Atlantic Ocean. The outfall route is from Bergen Point (Fleet Point) through Cedar Island to the ocean and its construction is vulnerable to storm activity and coastal erosion (Wright, 2007). The original construction of the outfall had cover over the pipe at the shoreline approximately 17 feet. Storms have reduced that cover to 8 feet at the shoreline and less to the south. In 1992, a project was implemented ($3.5 million) to install 700 feet of sheeting with a rehabilitated cathodic protection system at the shoreline.

Utilities

Electric power is transmitted and distributed by the LIPA. The Iroquois Gas Pipeline supplies natural gas to Keyspan and Keyspan provides natural gas to residents and businesses in Suffolk County. Figure 4-31 illustrates the general location of the Iroquois Gas Pipeline. Table 4-26 and Table 4-27 inventory the electric power plant facilities and substations, respectively, in Suffolk County.

Electric, telephone and cable utility lines cross Shelter Island Sound to Shelter Island. The power line is a connecting line to the south fork from the north fork, so they can route power in case of a line failure (Card, 2007).

4.6.4 High-Potential Loss Facilities

High-potential loss facilities include dams, levees, nuclear power plants, and military installations.

Dams

According to the National Inventory of Dams (NID), and input from the Planning Committee, there are twenty-three (23) dams in the County. A dam is included in the NID if: (1) it is a “high” or “significant” hazard potential class dam or, (2) it is a “low” hazard potential class dam that exceeds 25 feet in height and 15 acre-feet storage or, (3) it is a “low” hazard potential class dam that exceeds 50 acre-feet storage and 6 feet height. No dams have been identified as high hazard dams in the County. The dam hazard classification is unknown for dams provided by the Planning Committee that are not on the NID. Table 4-29 defines the hazard potential classification, as accepted by the NID Interagency Committee on Dam Safety. Table 4-30 lists the dams in Suffolk County.

Table 4-29. Dam Hazard Potential Classifications

Hazard Potential Classification	Loss of Human Life	Economic, Environmental, and Lifeline Losses
Low	None expected	Low and generally limited to owner
Significant	None expected	Yes
High	Probable. One or more expected	Yes (but not necessary for this classification)

HAZMAT Facilities

Suffolk County FRES identified hazardous materials (HAZMAT) facilities in the County. Updated jurisdiction-specific data on HAZMAT facilities is not currently available. The EPA Toxics Release Inventory (TRI) database identifies 113 TRI facilities in the County. TRI facilities are those required to report on chemical storage and use based on particular volumes of specified chemicals stored and used.

User-Defined Facilities

The Planning Committee identified additional facilities as critical including municipal halls, Department of Public Works facilities and yards, Department of Transportation facilities, points of distribution (PODs), and cultural resources such as beaches. These facilities were included in the risk assessment conducted for the County. Table 4-34 is a partial list of these user-defined critical facilities (municipal halls, Department of Public Works and Highway Departments) in Suffolk County.
